Franklin County CDC, which administered the MA Food Trust, provided $760,000 in funding to seven healthy food projects across the Commonwealth.

While these CDC activities are diverse, their underlying principles are similar: economic empowerment, housing stability, health equity, civic engagement, and racial equity. This work has built community resilience and infrastructure that is being called upon as we face new and unprecedented challenges. And while our 2020 results won’t be available until next year, we are already seeing evidence that CDCs are taking their justice at the forefront of their work.

This report highlights these activities and tells the collective impact of CDCs in 2019. Tables on our website show the complete GOALs Survey results.
